

Marjorie Miller <marjiemiller@gmail.com>

Your temper tantrum and my coffee cup

2 messages

Marjorie Miller <marjiemiller@gmail.com>Wed, Apr 15, 2009 at 2:08 PM

To: Danny <danny@dbtxcpa.com>

Cc: Wayne Gronquist <waynegronquist@gmail.com>, ecologicalal@gmail.com, Marjorie Miller <marjiemiller@gmail.com>

Danny,

You have quite the temper.

- I inquired about the performance of your Fiduciary Duties, considering you had been critical of Brian Dudley's performance of his Fiduciary Duties. You said "In what capacity?", I said "Power of Attorney". You said, "Again, in what specific capacity?" I said "Durable Power of Attorney" You said: "I don't recall what you're talking about". I then showed you the Durable Power of Attorney paperwork from your files that we had just copied. You said "If you think you've got a case, then go ahead."

- I then asked why you felt the money was safer in the caregivers hand's rather than in Mutual of Omaha's? You said "I got her money back for her and saved her the surrender charges." I then told you we had discovered that most of the annuities had no surrender charges, as they were more than 5 years old. I then informed you about the unfortunate fate of Maureen and the large amount of money "You got back for her". In the two years following your heroic recovery of the money for "Maureen", Sylvia drained Maureen's bank accounts to nearly zero, and Maureen ended up dead mysteriously, in Sylvia's care, a few months after requesting to be moved to a nursing home.

You then blew up, screaming that I had accused you of murder and threatening to call the police on us if we didn't leave the premises immediately.

I then tried to explain to you, that I did not accuse YOU of murder. I said this needs to be a learning situation, as your sign over there on the wall says that you practice "Theft Protection" for your customers, and you needed to take greater care when turning over large amounts of elderly people's money to their caregivers. You keep saying you did it for "Maureen", but that Durable Power of Attorney shows clearly that you were giving it to her caregiver, though such an act, at such an age, for someone whose earning $40,000 in interest/year on that money that you removed from a tax-deferred interest-bearing account, seems strange, doesn't it?

I unfortunately did not get to finish the last sentence, as you kept screaming "Are you accusing me of murder?" To be perfectly clear, I did not accuse you of murder, I merely said your actions may have caused a motive for murder by a caregiver. Your website says that you also do Forensic Accounting. I found it strange that you did not treat my inquiries in a Forensic manner, and instead rudely threw us out of your office screaming "You're accusing me of murder. Get out of here before I call the Police, no, call the Police right now. I'm calling your attorney." Slamming the door in my face, without letting me get my coffee cup that I brought in with me, to do the copying.

I would like my cup back now. You can deliver it to our attorney's office on your time and dime. As I was telling you as you screamed "I'm calling your attorney", if you have something to say, we're all listening, right here. Wayne has been informed that there will be no more non-stop billings of private verbal conversations which people then say they have no memory of.

Marjorie Miller and Alan Hamilton

Marjorie Miller <marjiemiller@gmail.com>

Thu, Apr 16, 2009 at 2:19 AM

To: m.denley@hotmail.com

hey Marilla!

Thought I might leave you with a chuckle as you start out your day!!! Here's the rest of the story I was telling you yesterday...

I think you should go and help Sylvia with her cats, and use your charm on her to find out where she put the money...;)...

Marjie :)

[Quoted text hidden]
